

Tom Hund

Principal

McMillan Pazdan Smith

Tom has practiced planning and architecture for more than thirty years, working with both public agencies and private sector clients. Projects include the development and redevelopment of communities throughout the southeast and his extensive experience ranges from advanced planning strategies and urban design to implementing details that bring a uniquely responsive architectural theme and scale to each project. Application of a well thought out project strategy, building and maintaining the best team for the effort, and managing for results drive Tom's passion to work closely with clients to produce successful projects.

Tom is a graduate of Clemson University and has served as an officer and managing principal for multi-disciplinary firms providing architectural, interior architecture, and planning services to clients throughout the southeast. Company leadership activities have included participation in the long range strategic planning, office wide operational and staff management, and in various advisory roles. Tom is a principal and managing principal of McMillan Pazdan Smith, Architecture's Charleston office. MPS is a South Eastern regional firm with six offices in the Carolinas and Georgia. MPS is community based serving multiple market sectors. Tom's focus has been providing strategy and design for real estate developers and other community planning and development activities in making great places for life.

Tom's Professional activities include leadership roles in The Urban Land Institute and The American Institute of Architects. Tom also serves the Community and the industry through service on the Board of governors for The Charleston Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, as a trustee for Clemson University's Real Estate Program and as a member of the tri-county Council of Government's Regional Land Use Committee.
